Course Description

Suicides are the leading cause of death in Illinois jails. Mental health issues are interfaced with this phenomenon. The course is designed to provide corrections officers, criminal justice, and law enforcement professionals in how to best address these most crucial corrections issues. The problem of suicide in jails is at what some experts call epidemic proportions in Illinois. Often inmates come to the jail with mental health issues that lead to and exacerbate their suicidal attempts. Litigation in jail suicide cases has cost the citizens of Illinois significant amounts of money. Experience tells us that almost all jail suicides can be prevented through a comprehensive program of recognition, assessment, and prevention. Programs that can be developed through information received in this training, begins at intake, and follows the inmate through his stay at the correctional facility. The program is designed to provide criminal justice officers with the skills and knowledge required to effectively respond and provide appropriate action. The skills addressed will include, but not be limited to legal, social, and criminal responses to jail suicides. This program has been designed with the purpose of addressing the issues related to suicide in the Illinois jail system. It meets all standards set forth by Illinois Administrative Code, title 20; Chapter 1 Subchapter f, section 701.90(h).

Instructor

Gail P. Sullivan graduated from Loyola University (BA) and DePaul University (MA) with honors. She has worked in the field of social services and criminal justice for the past 25 years in the private and public sectors. She has provided therapy to 100 employees (Illinois certified) to serve the needs of sexually traumatized and problematic children under the age of 12 years. As an expert, she has sat on the States Attorney Task Force for the Mass Molestation of Children and the Cook County Child Death Review Team. She has developed curriculum that meets State requirements for the certification of juvenile police officers. She provides training for the Cook County Adult Probation Department, Illinois Crisis Intervention Team and Homeland Security, as well as MTUs across the state.
